

Biking is one of the most common ways of transportation in Copenhagen. With the city that is connected with several bridges, it is hard to know when a bridge is going to rise. This is something that will stop traffic for several minutes, and therefore delay hundreds of people on their way to work, school etc. An app that will notify the users about when and where it will happen, will give people a chance to reconsider their route when biking, and hopefully people can be on time to their desired destination.
